LEGENDS OF THE SOCIETY

The cries, the screams, the tears and the fears was all that was left for Piamans. It was a dusk of terror and only the Theists were shielded against the consequences that befell the Piamans. The defunct had scarifications that indicated the sign of vengeance in the Piaman language. To them the death of their members was considered as a martyrdom death but still it was an obscure. It wasnt long untill when the pope arrived during the small hours. They probed the deceased with help of the piaman police force and to thier anticipation the pope conceded with them. The deceased deaths was as an act of heathenism.

It was obscure for them and most of them were bedlamed, that they started having antithetic conjectures about the hypothesis. The popes words were not so direct and lucid that this led to a strife between those who surmised with the pope and those who negated the pope's words. it was dawning and Piamans were now getting back to their daily routine. those who were in conflict with the pope's word started shoving him off, but just before he departed a shrill voice uttered behind him, "you are wrong! these deaths are completely unnatural. Look around you pope! Look around the innocent bairn left behind in this inhumane world. what do we call this? A sacrifice, a genocide or is this the fury of the gods trying to make a statement?
